6	Course Description
	Want to study both criminology and sociology at University? Our BA (Hons) Sociology and Criminology degree combines both subjects and allows you to take a year-long industry placement. This course will enable you to develop an understanding of society and social factors and how this affects crime and criminals, giving you a solid human understanding that will put you in a good position for range of careers or further study. What's covered in the course? Combining sociology with the study of criminology gives you a chance to benefit from the cutting-edge thinking of the University's Centre for Applied Criminology, a research Centre of Excellence. The recently launched Centre for Critical Social Research also brings sociological concerns to the fore. This course is taught with an equal number of Sociology and Criminology modules. You'll share a common first year with the Sociology BA, giving you a wide range of understanding and letting you see what your options are before advancing. The course introduces you to sociological theories and contexts allowing you to situate and to inform your studies in criminology with a focus on crime, criminals and the operation of criminal justice agencies. You'll develop communication and research skills through our wide range of assessments, as well as a clear understanding of social policy and criminology.

11	Course Learning Outcomes
	On completion of the degree, graduates will be able to demonstrate:
1	An in-depth knowledge of sociological and criminological perspectives and methods, and their application to contemporary social issues, to social identities and institutions, crime and deviance, and to social change.
2	An understanding of the disciplines of sociology and criminology – through the programme's core themes of applied social and criminological theory and research, cultural sociology, and policy, activism and politics - as being theoretically informed, evidence-based, relevant, professionally focussed and applied.
3	An alertness to the inherently interdisciplinary nature of sociology and criminology as disciplines and to demonstrate their proficiency with theories, methods, themes and perspectives unique to sociology and criminology: but also to demonstrate their working knowledge of the relevant political, economic, historical, and cultural factors and perspectives to be drawn on by sociologists and criminologists when venturing to adequately understand crime and society as a whole.

4	A capacity for students to show that they can make sense of a wide range of social institutions, crime and deviance, social changes and important social issues – such as poverty, class, racism, sexism and other forms of inequalities and discrimination.
5	Critical reflection on the experience of work and interactions with sociological and criminological thought where students select to undertake a work-experience placement
6	Proficiency in relevant transferable and employability-related skills to include: disciplined oral and written communication, the production of well-structured written work and presentations, the use of software packages and other technology, and the collection, comprehension and analysis of a wide range of research and data.
7	The development and application of broader social and cognitive skills involving social collaboration and understanding, independence of judgement and argument, problem solving and personal commitment and responsibility.
8	Understanding of crime and society recognising the importance of political, economic and cultural interconnectedness at local, national, and international levels.

13 Overall Student Workload and Balance of Assessment

Overall student workload consists of class contact hours, independent learning and assessment activity, with each credit taken equating to a total study time of around 10 hours. While actual contact hours may depend on the optional modules selected, the following information gives an indication of how much time students will need to allocate to different activities at each level of the course.

- Scheduled Learning includes lectures, practical classes and workshops, contact time specified in timetable
- Directed Learning includes placements, work-based learning, external visits, on-line activity, Graduate+, peer learning
- Private Study includes preparation for exams

The balance of assessment by mode of assessment (e.g. coursework, exam and in-person) depends to some extent on the optional modules chosen by students. The approximate percentage of the course assessed by coursework, exam and in-person is shown below.

Level 4

Workload
