6	Course Description
	This master's course is designed to equip you with the professional skills necessary to succeed in the digital media production industry, while grounding your knowledge in production theory. You will gain a comprehensive understanding of visual and audio mediums and their ongoing evolution. The course embeds professional practice throughout its curriculum, preparing you for careers across a range of digital media, including contemporary online platforms as well as established television and radio broadcasting. You will be encouraged to apply academic thinking to evaluate the current state of digital media, and critically reflect on your performance. Throughout your studies, you will be supported by experienced academic staff, such as documentary producer Sam Coley and television producer Emily Rushmer. You will have access to Adobe Creative Cloud applications and our state-of-the-art facilities at the Parkside campus, including radio and TV studios, and audio and video editing suites. A full range of video and still cameras, lighting, and audio recording equipment will be available for hire, to help you complete your course work. If you have an interest in video production, you will develop an in-depth understanding of production processes and explore online content development and distribution. Students with an interest in audio production will build skills in sound design, multitrack editing, and audio mastering, with opportunities to create podcasts, on-demand content, or traditional radio documentaries and features. The course includes training in live studio production and presentation skills, along with techniques for creating targeted content for social media platforms. The course encourages aspiring freelancers to develop their entrepreneurial and networking abilities to help launch a professional career. Specialist production modules are designed to mirror industry approaches, requiring teamwork for some assessments. This practical approach has enabled numerous recent MA students to transition seamlessly into professional production roles. The course provides a comprehensive blend of practical experience, theoretical knowledge, and professional development, to ensure you are well-prepared for a career in the digital media production industry.

14	Course Learning, Teaching and Assessment Strategy
	Students will engage in a variety of hands-on projects, both individually and in teams, which mirror real-world media production environments. These projects include creating production portfolios to showcase technical skills and creativity, and taking part in live presentations and studio assessments. Workshops, seminars, and masterclasses with industry professionals will provide insights into current industry practices and trends. Students will take part in critical discussions and analyse media content, to develop an understanding of media theory and how it can inform production practices. Diverse assessment methods will test practical skills and knowledge understanding throughout the course. Students will submit production portfolios, which demonstrate their ability to plan, produce, and evaluate media projects. Written evaluations will accompany these portfolios, requiring students to critically reflect on their work, methodologies, and outcomes. Peer assessments and presentations will also form part of the assessment strategy, encouraging collaborative learning and critical peer feedback. Completing both individual and team projects will ensure students develop self-reliance and collaborative skills, in preparation for the media production industry. The final assessment can be a research informed dissertation, or a practical production project. Feedback will include written comments, ‘feed forward’ advice, one-on-one tutorials, and peer reviews. Students will receive constructive insights into their progress, strengths, and areas for improvement. Students are expected to engage actively with all elements of the course, including regular attendance, good communication, and a proactive approach to collaborative projects. Students are required to demonstrate initiative in their learning and take responsibility for their personal development. Participation in discussions, workshops, and collaborative projects is critical. Students should be open to feedback and willing to critically evaluate their work to further self-awareness and help identify areas for future improvement.

16	Overall Student Workload and Balance of Assessment
-----------	---

Overall student workload consists of class contact hours, independent learning and assessment activity, with each credit taken equating to a total study time of around 10 hours. While actual contact hours may depend on the optional modules selected, the following information gives an indication of how much time students will need to allocate to different activities at each level of the course.

- Scheduled Learning includes lectures, practical classes and workshops, contact time specified in timetable
- Directed Learning includes placements, work-based learning, external visits, on-line activity, Graduate+, peer learning
- Private Study includes preparation for exams

The balance of assessment by mode of assessment (e.g. coursework, exam and in-person) depends to some extent on the optional modules chosen by students. The approximate percentage of the course assessed by coursework, exam and in-person is shown below.

Level 7

Workload

XX% time spent in timetabled teaching and learning activity

Activity	Number of Hours
Scheduled Learning	146
Directed Learning	1070
Private Study	584
Total Hours	1,800

Balance of Assessment

Assessment Mode	Percentage
Coursework	80%
Exam	0%
In-Person	20%
